

Set: Rich's brother, Willy, the Civil War re-enactor, flew in and designed a Union camp in the front yard to compliment the Tara decorations. The Confederate decorations and bunting on the house certainly caused the neighbors concern!

Costumes: Southern Belles, Rhett's and Ashley's were numerous as well as a full Union regiment of Civil War caps and blue t-shirts!

Catering: The chefs in the movie club delivered with a full Deep South buffet of chicken, ribs, with all the fixin's.

Drink: While Rich "Rhett" served up the gentlemen with aged Bourbon with a splash of Georgia still water, the ladies demurely sipped their Mint Juleps. I declare!

Score: Rich obtained Tennessee Ernie Ford LPs as well as contemporary artists playing Civil War antebellum era music on authentic instruments. The classic Max Steiner film theme played as well.

Action: As the Tara and Wilkes family looked on, Willy called the Union troops to order with his bugle and proceeded to train them in authentic drill maneuvers from the Civil War!
